How to send payment from your bitcoin wallet

There are many different types of wallet available both mobile, computer based or hardware wallets. Accordingly, this section is a general outline.

Two functions however are critical to any transactions involving crypto currencies. These are the amount of BTC that is being sent and the address it is being sent

Where the value of BTC being sent is to cover a specific USD amount. It is necessary that the transaction takes place within a short time of establishing the required BTC.

For the same reason the address to send the BTC to is also only valid for a short time and only for that one transaction

If you are not able to complete your transfer on the same day you initiated the purchase of a CFX trading Pack it is advisable to go back to CFX, select your preferred Pack again and obtain a new BTC amount and Payment address.

Most wallets will send the exact amount required and deduct that amount plus the transaction cost from your wallet.
